Water In Haggett's Nearing Normal Level

The heavy rains of the past several weeks have brought the water in Haggett's pond up to the highest level that observers have noted in recent years. Down to 72.5 inches below normal last November, the lowest point the pond has reached in the history of available records, the rains of the past few weeks have brought it back to its present level of only 20 inches below normal, a gain of more than 50 inches that almost covers the former bare sandy shore line.

Red Cross Drive Short Of Quota

"Andover chapter has every reason to be grateful to the people of our community for their loyal support of our programs," says chairman Ernest S. Young, of the Red Cross chapter.

"Volunteers by the score," continued Mr. Young, are finding time in their already busy lives to assume responsibility for one phase or another of the many new jobs the Red Cross is being called upon to do in these days of world unrest, as well as the tasks normally belonging to it. These tasks have become so much heavier than was anticipated last fall that needs have repeatedly been revised upwards, as world crisis has deepened. Each increase in the size of the armed forces is directly reflected in increased Red Cross expenditures and work.

"This is one of the main reasons why we are so deeply concerned about reaching the fund

Visiting Nurse Drive In April

A drive for funds to support the visiting nurse will be opened Apr. 16 with a goal of $6000 in view.

This action was decided at a recent meeting of the Visiting Nurse Assn. of Andover Inc., which last year took over the project that had been under the local Red Cross chapter.

President Irving J. Whitcomb reported on the progress in the first year and reviewed the excellent work done by the nurse, Miss Helen L. Woodbury. In the past year she has made well over 1000 visits and the association has received many encouraging and complimentary letters in connection with the needed and helpful work being accomplished.

Edward A. Romeo, vice president of the Andover Service club, has accepted the chairmanship of the 1951 drive. George B. Westhaver, director of the Andover Service

Construction of Andover's two new elementary school buildings for which the special town meeting last November voted an appropriation of $1,200,000 is expected to be started within the next month.

The school building committee which has been making a study of the bids in preparation to its action in awarding the contract feels that the town can well expect to see activity by Apr. 15.

The present central school buildings will remain in use until the new 18-room school is completed on the adjacent land on Bartlet street.

Next fall it will be necessary, and would have been even if the town had not decided to build, to house a fifth grade class in the Junior high school building.

The school building committee has every reason to be pleased with the high calibre of all the contractors who submitted bids. It was noted that all were very close.

The committee also feels pleased to note that while the costs of construction have gone up the total combined bids on the two buildings was comfortably under the amount appropriated. However, the general contract price does not include the cost of furniture and equipment. This is provided for by allotting $50,000 in the appropriation to cover such costs.

While construction of the 18-room central school building and the six-room school in West Andover will be started soon the committee is looking forward to seeing them completed and ready for occupancy by September, 1952.

Disabled veterans who are entitled to the $2000 abatement on disabled veterans' real estate are reminded that it is necessary that a statement showing the rate of disability be obtained from the veterans administration before the claim will be allowed.

What Our Readers Say —

LOITERING IN DOORWAYS

Editor of the Townsman:
There is a condition existing on the Main street that I believe any observing person regards with distaste. A group of youths who can find no more profitable way to spend their time than to clutter up the entrances of stores thereby hurting persons who are in business.

Is it that the police are not efficient enough or are they indifferent to handling this situation? To my knowledge they have tried a few times to rid the sidewalks and entrances of these teen age "bums." I use the word "bums" because I consider anyone who wastes time in idleness, spits on the sidewalks, throws waste paper about and makes fresh remarks about women or girls walking by, deserves no higher rating than is implied in that word.

Recently a three-story rooming house was threatened with fire and injury to its occupants by one of their "pranks." Shot gun cartridges were broken, lighted matches put into them and these were placed in the corridor and on the stairs.

To those who think that Andover has no juvenile delinquency problems just "dig" below the surface a bit and you will discover a surprising number of adolescents who are definitely problems. Are their parents to blame entirely? From all appearances they do not discipline them much. There seems to be a hush-hush program in process—never prosecute, for you may hurt someone's feelings or pride. A "tough" talk from the police only leaves them "laughing up their sleeves."

All of us who want our Main street to appear clean in all respects both to ourselves and outsiders should consider it our duty as citizens to do something to remedy this situation.

On Good Friday afternoon when I had just come out of church I went to my husband's place of business. There on the doorstep were 16-age boys blocking the doorway. One of them spat near my feet and I had to stop and say to them, "May I get in, please?" Some of them moved aside slightly and passed a remark on what I had said. I believe that no woman should have to be thus offended on the Main street or anywhere in our town.

Sincerely,

(Ed. Note—When told about this situation Monday, Chief Dane said that police are taking the names of the boys loitering in the doorways and if they get them a second time they will go into court.)

What Our Readers Say—

LOITERING IN DOORWAYS

Editor of the Townsman:

There is a condition existing on the Main street that I believe any observing person regards with distaste. A group of youths who can find no more profitable way to spend their time than to clutter up the entrances of stores thereby hurting persons who are in business.

Is it that the police are not efficient enough or are they indifferent to handling this situation? To my knowledge they have tried a few times to rid the sidewalks and entrances of these teen age "bums." I use the word "bums" because I consider anyone who wastes time in idleness, spits on the sidewalks, throws waste paper about and makes fresh remarks about women or girls walking by, deserves no higher rating than is implied in that word.

Recently a three-story rooming house was threatened with fire and injury to its occupants by one of their "pranks." Shot gun cartridges were broken, lighted matches put into them and these were placed in the corridor and on the stairs.

To those who think that Andover has no juvenile delinquency problems just "dig" below the surface a bit and you will discover a surprising number of adolescents who are definitely problems. Are their parents to blame entirely? From all appearances they do not discipline them much. There seems to be a hush-hush program in process—never prosecute, for you may hurt someone's feelings or pride. A "tough" talk from the police only leaves them "laughing up their sleeves."

All of us who want our Main street to appear clean in all respects both to ourselves and outsiders should consider it our duty as citizens to do something to remedy this situation.

"Arts And Crafts" At Film Festival

"Arts and Crafts" will be the theme of the last evening of the film festival programs at the Memorial Hall library at 7.45 p. m., Monday, Apr. 2. There will be five films, on varied phases of art, of which the first is "What Is Modern Art?" This color film discusses the pros and cons of modern art and shows paintings by Van Gogh, Picasso, Mondrian, Dali, Miro, etc. "Designing Women" brings the subject of good design into the appreciation of all who see the film; the third, "Aubusson Tapestries" is particularly concerned with the designing rather than the actual weaving of a modern tapestry.

"Plastic Art" takes the observer step by step through the stages by which a well-known sculptor conceives and executes a bronze statuary group. First there is the sketch, then the wire skeletons, rough figures built up from observation of living models, and measurements from which enlarged group is reproduced and cast in bronze.

There is an Indian legend of how a loon, the water bird, received his distinguishing neck-band. This film, "Loon's Necklace" brings that legend into life. The public is invited.

Commuters' Column

Highball

If you've waited at a grade crossing while a train goes by, perhaps you've noticed that the gate tender always waves at the trainman, who always happens to be standing on the back platform.

I never thought anything about this until the other day, when I was sitting in the rear of the last car on the 8:08. We passed a crossing, and our trainman casually stepped out on the platform and exchanged greetings with the crossing tender.

"Friend of yours?" I asked, as he came back.

He grinned and shook his head. "Don't even know his name," he said.

"Then why the salutations?"

"They're not. They're known technically as a highball and an acknowledgment. You see," he went on, "we railroad people never miss a chance to check up on our equipment. Here we are, rolling along, and we might be developing a hot box but can't see the smoke—or perhaps something's caught on the cow-catcher. So whenever we pass one of our men—a crossing tender, a section foreman, the conductor of a freight on a siding—he automatically gives us a quick once-over and, if all's well, raises his hand—meaning 'you're O.K. keep going'.

"That's the 'highball'. If he spotted anything wrong, he'd give us another signal and we'd stop to investigate. So one of us train crew is supposed to be on the rear platform and acknowledge the signal. It's just another precaution—the old railroad custom of check and double check."

We Must Keep Competition

The scare buying which was so much in the headlines some months ago has vanished almost completely. And the fact is that it made no sense in the first place.

This country has not encountered shortages of anything essential. Consumer goods output, despite the demands so far made by the defense program, is running well ahead of last year. Even at the peak which is now planned for the armament effort military needs will take less than 20 per cent of our total production.

This is a tribute to the strength and stature of American enterprise in every line of endeavor. Our production potential now is greater than it ever was. Our factories can spew forth goods of all kinds in an almost limitless stream.

And production does not tell the whole story. The consumer does not go to a factory or a farm to buy what he needs, save in rare cases. Someone must provide a bridge between the producer and the user. That bridge is retailing. It has grown just as productive enterprise has grown. It has improved, just as productive industry has improved. It serves us better than ever.

There is one fact we must not forget. It is simply this: the high efficiency of our factories and our stores is the result of competition. If one producer charges more for a similar product than another producer, he immediately risks loss of orders. If one retailer arbitrarily charges more for an item than the retailer down the street, he will lose customers. There is a grave danger that we will have so much government control that this competitive factor will be undermined. That would be economic tragedy for America.

The secret of happiness is not in doing what one likes, but in liking what one has to do. - J. M. Barrie.

God gave us two ends—one to sit on and the other to think with. A man's success depends on which end he used the most. It's a case of heads you win, tails you lose.—Yale, (Mich.) Expositor.

YOU AND YOUR HEART

There is a great deal the individual can do to help keep his heart sound and strong.

Following the doctor's suggestions about a daily routine of healthful living may help to avoid heart ailments, or to limit their effect. Such a routine should include a nourishing diet, keeping weight normal, getting plenty of rest and sleep, trying to avoid tension during work, and developing a relaxing hobby.

It is also important to have regular physical examinations by a doctor. Such check-ups generally insure that if heart trouble should occur it will be discovered early, when modern methods of treatment will help most to control it.

INTERNATIONAL WHIRLIGIG - By John Fisher

Challenge Reds To Reveal Truth About Slave Camps

Washington has put Moscow on the spot. We again have challenged the Soviet Union to allow United Nations investigators to study slave labor in the U. S. S. R. and elsewhere.

American charges against the inhuman system were recorded at U. N. economic and social council, meeting recently in Santiago, Chile. In lent while the Christian world was recalling the suffering of Calvary, delegates were told of millions of people today plodding the Via Dolorosa to Arctic Europe and Siberia, in many cases because of their religious faith.

The Lithuanian American Catholic Congress recently declared: "Since June 1940, Lithuania was transformed into a land of martyrs for Christianity. The hierarchy is entirely eliminated. Most of the clergy are either dead or are suffering with their flocks in Soviet prisons or Arctic Siberia.

"Families are deliberately separated in order that Catholic Lithuanian children be brought up as Russian heathens." Protestant East Prussians, Latvians and Czechs are enduring a similar fate.

Old Russian Custom, Say Apologists

Apologists for the Soviet Union argue that United States officials never lodged official complaints against the political exile system of the czars and that the present "corrective labor service" is but a projection of the old imperialist punishments.

Humanitarians never condoned the former penal setup. Stories of the anguish of the Poles, tramping on foot in the snow across Russia and Asia, still shock decent people. But in 1914 there were at the most 15,000 political exiles in Siberia. The American delegate at Santiago, declared that estimates of Soviet slave labor run from 2,000,000 to 20,000,000.

"Czarist Russia was free," he added, "in comparison with Soviet Russia," where the official plan for 1941 showed 14 per cent of original construction was carried out by forced labor. Czarist despots never made a pretense of human rights and liberated workers, as do the Communists.

Those who excuse this phase of Communism maintain that in its end result, the slave system is a blessing. They say current bondage gives future generations vast public improvements to enjoy forever.

Planting Oaks for Stalin

Right now forced labor is employed in a new construction project, officially described as the "changing nature" campaign. The "remaking nature" plan calls for a belt of trees to protect farm lands from wind and to retain moisture in the topsoil. Slaves are collecting acorns and planting oaks from the Crimea to the Caspian Sea.

Other geographical plastic surgery is enormous irrigation works in the Ukraine Caucasus and Central Asian republics, the Volga-Don canal, Kuibyshev and Stalingrad electric power plants and highway networks in the Lena River basin in Siberia.

Moscow papers are crammed with enthusiastic predictions about these enduring "Russian pyramids" for fabulous food and power resources in peace and war. But, like the triangular rock piles of the Pharaohs, built by the sweat and blood of ancient Israellites in the first Passover days and by other prisoners, these monuments will bear age-long witness to the misery of slaves and the cruelty of Russian taskmasters.

No one behind the Iron Curtain is immune from deportation to concentration camps. Any Russian political suspect or labor delinquent—guilty of slackness, absenteeism etc.—is liable for "corrective labor." Thousands of German POW's are still in northeastern Asia. Some of the evidence on camp conditions, presented by American delegates, came from Japanese prisoners of war.

Former Allies Now Slaves

Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia now copy Russia on slave camps. Polish political prisoners have been shipped to Soviet coal mines. French, Dutch and Belgian girls, first captured by the Nazis and later "liberated" from farm and factory work in Germany by Soviet troops, were sent to the Urals and are held there even today, as members of forced labor units.

The plight of Stalin's slaves moves every free man or woman with compassion, horror and rage. Readers of this column from time to time have been shown different parts of the terrible picture. As a writer on the evils of Communism, further glimpses of tragedy are constantly brought to my attention.

This is what life is like under Communist Simon Legrees: The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Gerhard A. Fittkau, director of the St. Boniface society, New York City, was a pastor in East Prussia when the Russians took over. He and 55 of his townspeople were earmarked for deportation to the slave colony in the Vorkuta Peninsula, in Arctic Russia, north of the Urals.

"We were kept standing 14 days in a tiny pen," he says, "without water for the first four days. We were fed a sour potato soup. Finally we were placed in a freight car for a journey that lasted 21 days. Three times we were let out; twice to unload corpses. No one knows if the dead were buried or left to be eaten by wolves.

Seven of 300 Survive

"At camp our task was to dig canals to develop the area. Three hundred Ukrainians and Poles had started the work. Only seven were alive when we arrived. Our daily ration was a soup of frozen turnips and lukewarm water. We had a gruel of grain with a few drops of (Continued on Page 12)

Barnard Contest

The winners of the annual Barnard essay-writing contest revealed themselves Monday when they identified their works and pseudonyms in a special assembly.

Contrary to past procedure, the winners will not be obliged to memorize their essays, which will be delivered this year in a school assembly.

Not In Drama Festival

Several weeks ago Mervin E. Stevens and a group of his dramatic students presented a one-act play, "The Game of Chess," at Marblehead high. Tuesday, Marblehead brought an exchange play here, entertaining ninth graders and Punchard students with "Two Crooks and a Lady." Robert Gaskill, Punchard senior, introduced the play, which Miss Nancy Fox of Marblehead, directed. Marblehead will present this play at the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival, which is being held at Newton High school, this Friday and Saturday, Mar. 30 and 31. Unfortunately, due to the pressure of other extra-curricular activities, the Punchard entry, "O Distant Land," had to be cancelled, thus, Punchard will not be represented in this year's festival.

Guidance Notes

A special assembly for juniors and sophomores was held Wednesday in which headmaster Harold Howe II and Bernard M. Kellmurray, boys' guidance director, explained in detail the routine in selecting next year's courses. Each junior and sophomore is being interviewed privately by either Mr. Kellmurray or Miss Jeanne T. Bernadin, girls' guidance director.

Easter Egg Hunt Attracts Crowds

Andover's juvenile population braved last Saturday's March winds and gathered with their parents and many other spectators at the park to make the second annual Easter Egg hunt a grand success.

Nearly 13,000 pieces of candy were distributed about the place and the eager youngsters cleaned them up in a minute and a half.

The younger group of children were taken aside to another part of the park to enjoy a hunt of their own.

Among the pieces of candy hidden about the park were 30 marked for special prizes. These entitled the finders to either a large chocolate bunny or a large chocolate chicken.

The Andover Recreation committee, under whose auspices the event was held, wishes to thank all cooperating organizations and those who assisted financially or otherwise in the success of the affair.

Among the organizations were the Youth Center, the Legion post and the Legion auxiliary, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Andover Service club, the police and fire departments.

"I grew so weak that I couldn't say the whole rosary at once. Then, for no apparent reason, I was sent back to my native village a physical wreck. Later a kind-hearted Russian army sergeant smuggled me out of the Soviet zone in a cart loaded with 13 dead bodies. I escaped to West Berlin and freedom on a British supply train."

Official Soviet documents from the Ukhta-Pechora camp in the Arctic Circle, presented to the United Nations meeting in Chile, revealed similar starvation tactics. Basic rations were as low as 1,300 calories per day.

The daily ration for police dogs was 1,183 calories.
